PEOPLE'S PALACE CRICKET CLUB.

SEASON 1890.

At this period of the year it is a treat to take a retrospective glance at the past, and to calmly take a survey of events which have now passed into history. It is very pleasing to have to record that during the past season there has been an awakening on the part of the people of London to the fact that the physical recreation gained by the game of cricket, while important to the appreciative few, has also an educative influence on the community at large. The people who have shown the more interest in the game during the past few years, having a greater knowledge of the rules, are more likely to be capable of judging the merit of the men who play. The People's Palace Cricket Club has had many difficulties to fight against; and at the commencement of the season, a good many of their best men were absent, through the absence of several of their best members, and the Club has been fortunate in having been operated upon during the winter part of the season by the influence of the Captain and Secretary to play. With such a list of names under the abovementioned circumstances, the result can hardly be expected. During the season 13 matches were played, of which 8 were lost, 3 drawn, 2 won; two of the drawn games were greatly in favour of the Palace Club and the following will be found the batting and bowling analysis

MRS. G. H. HARLOW.
There is one place that waits for her, one home and one goal, As a ship that hath come from the bounds of the sea.

Turns to thee, and would fain in thy heart makes its nest.

Looks again for her haven. I look, love, for thee;

Till the place of the heaven's and the earth shall be mov'd,

It is my fate to love thee and thine to be lov'd.

The bird may go forth when the long night is o'er.

But my soul shall for aye in thy keeping remain:

There is not in the wide world a valley so sweet
Yet it was not that Nature had shed o'er the scene.

Oh, no! it was something more exquisite still.

Her purest of crystal and brighest of green;

Twas not the soft magic of streamlet or hill,—

There's a maiden I would sing.

The ocean storm I'd brave for her dear sake.

I've tried to warm.

I have sought

If from sunny Spain or France

And if the powers above

Speak but one kind tender word,

Refuse to aid my love.

But I will not leave my Pearl.

O snowy-breasted Pearl.

Would lure my heart from thine.

While I, half doubting, whisper a consent,

And he is whispering words of sweet intent.

I feel his kisses on my fever'd brow,

Is this a dream?—then waking would be pain.

If we must part—ah! why should it be now?
