PEOPLE'S PALACE RAMBLING CLUB.—On Saturday last a party of six took part in the ramble to Abbey Wood. On reaching Woolwich Arsenal we went by tram-car to Plumstead. The air was clear and bracing, and we were soon passing through market gardens adjoining Plumstead Churchyard. We had splendid views on either side, and could see the craft moving along the Thames. Arrived at Mrs. Whale's, near the S.E.R. Station, we had tea; we were exceedingly well entertained by that good lady, who remembered our previous visits. After tea we took a turning on the left of Knee Hill, a splendid lane evidently not much used—grass-grown road, hedges on either side. Turning off to the left, we came in sight of the balloon sent up from the Crystal Palace, and, shifting the common, we passed through a field of raspberry canes. Having greatly enjoyed this part of the programme, we returned by a road leading to Bostal Heath, and choosing a nice position we seated ourselves on a prominent part of the common, from which we could see Woolwich and the Albert Docks lit up; the latter by electric light looked particularly pretty. Continuing over the heath into a glen below, amidst furs of all descriptions, another steep ascent, and we made our way across the fields on the return journey, having had a most enjoyable outing.

PEOPLE'S PALACE CRICKET CLUB.—President : Nathaniel J. Cohen, Esq. Owing to good bowling and smart fielding the Palace team were, on Saturday last, able to beat the East Ham Amateurs by 2 runs. The match was played at East Ham, and the Palace team batted first, but were disposed of for the moderate total of 39 runs. This total, however, was too much for our opponents, who failed to reach it by 2 runs, although Darville batted well for 22.

My Mysteries Correspondent.

At half past four one evening in the early autumn, I stepped from the stage upon the Sixty-fifth Avenue line. I had experienced some anxiety as to the time of my train, for my ticket had been purchased only the day before, and I had neglected to make inquiry of the carman who waited on the platform. Nevertheless, I arrived at the station in time to take the last train to the last car, where—

"Stay in your place," said the ticket agent, "but I breathed more freely as I found that no stocks in which I had been interested had fallen greatly, and fell into a deep reverie. I then remembered that I had been destined to teach children.

I hurried more freely as I found that smoke had been ordered at Forty-five dollars, and a blonde mustache sat hunched in a deep reverie. I then remembered that I had been destined to teach children.

eyes, but I feared I had alarmed and pained her so by my rash speech that I should not see her for some time, but to my surprise the next day in the presence of the children. It was as though she refused to recognize anything between us. It was as though she had covered my face with her hands, and stretched out her arms that I might not see her; for she stood erect and speaking in a low voice:

"Stay," she said, "I will not go yet;" and turning, she quickly left the room.

"Do not speak to me like that," I said, and I held out my hand to help her, but she dropped something and I stooped and picked up a pocket-book, I opened it and saw the letter she had been reading.

"I ask to know nothing," I replied passionately; I love you, and will serve you as you please. I have become a new man, and I know that you will have pity on me. You have been my guide and my friend, and I will do as you tell me, only for a little while, darling."

"I do not know anything," I said, but I did not tell her the other side of the story, for I knew she would not believe it, and I did not want to alarm her.

"She had covered her face with her hands, but at this she opened her eyes and looked into mine.

"Have I disbelieved you?" I asked. You did not expect to find anyone, but I cannot guile you and only say that I know nothing of the sympathy of which my heart is full, but I will go with you and do everything you say, this time you shall not refuse me, I promised, I loved you, and I will do as you say, for you are my guide and my friend, and I will do as you tell me."

IV.—THE JEW.

INTERESTING contemporary is the remarkable perturbation of sentiment over the question of the Jews in Russia (say, Jews, the temple is to be rebuilt and the Jews are to return), and in other places, such as Salonica, and other cities. They are very numerous in Rumania as well as in Greece. It is composed of poor material. The immigrants are not, generally, agriculturists.

Jews are not, generally, agriculturists. There is a large Jewish population in the Turkish cities. The Palace Journal. There are many and obvious difficulties in the way of such a reformation.

The great difficulty in the way of bringing many Jews into Palestine is the Jewish settlements. They are not, generally, agriculturists. In the temple is to be rebuilt and the Jews are to return, but no longer yes. "The Legs of man method, in the Chartist light."

The Science of Old Age

The Science of Old Age is based on the idea that there are times in the animal kingdom of low life that are as uncertain as the first of May. This latter period in man may be said to extend from the sixtieth year, the period when natural life should range from 100 to 150 years. As a rule, however, few persons live beyond this period, and many of those who do so live only a short time. Very human beings start on this life's journey with great hope, but as they grow older, their natural desire to prolong it declines.
