Any of our students who are thinking of such a career, and wishing for such an appointment, can apply to Mr. V. King, or for further particulars.

AUGUST BANK HOLIDAY.—The People's Palace opened at 10 this morning. The Golden Fleece Lodge, the Military Band, and the girls of the Junior Section (girls), Thursday, 6.30 p.m. Several interesting feats were then accomplished, such as Plate Diving, High Dive, and Swimming under Water by Miss Grace Hurley. Swimming on one side and Double Swimming by the Misses Grace Hurley, Miss F. Hurley; Miss C. Gardner, 3rd Heat, Miss Percival. Two Lengths of Bathing, and another the mulberry tree. Water by Miss Grace Hurley. Swimming of the Club, very kindly presiding on the one occupied by Charles Darwin when he was studying at the University.

AMONG the more interesting collections is the copy of the four Gospels in Latin, executed by the Saxon Chronicle, the manuscript of Thomas-a-Becket, and a manuscript copy of Chaucer's "Troylus." A fine gift of Lord Iveagh. At 8 o'clock every part of the Palace was packed to overflowing with an enthusiastic audience to witness the costume recital of Wal­lace's popular opera "Maritana."

PEOPLE'S PALACE YOUNG WOMEN'S SWIMMING CLUB.—The First Swimming Competition took place on Tuesday the 2nd. Lady Jennings, the President of the Club, very kindly presiding on the occasion. Several races took place with the following results—One Length of Bath—1st Heat; Miss L. Brown; Miss Grace Hurley, 2nd Heat; Miss F. Hurley; Miss C. Gardner, 3rd Heat; Miss Percival. Two Lengths of Bathing—Miss Brown; Miss Hurley. Several interesting feats were then accomplished, such as Plate Diving, High Dive, and Swimming under Water by Miss Grace Hurley. Swimming on one side and Double Swimming by the Misses Grace Hurley, and Ryan. Walking, Swimming, and Diving through Hoops. A Duck Hunt, which proved very amusing, illustrating method of rescuing a drowning person. Throughout the evening, Mrs. McIntosh gave selections of music. It is hoped that the Club, which has made a very spirited start, will have a large number of entries for the next entertainment. Too much praise cannot be given to the girls for their excellent conduct, with which Lady Jennings was very pleased.

The Queen's Hall is now in the hands of the carpenters preparing for the Annual Picture Exhibition, which will open Saturday, 13th inst. The next number of the Journal will contain the catalogue.

The Queen's Hall will remain closed until the 15th, but the Winter Garden will be open each day as usual. Promenade concerts, pianoforte recitals, etc., have been arranged.

Among the more interesting collections is the copy of the four Gospels in Latin, executed by the Saxon Chronicle, the manuscript of Thomas-a-Becket, and a manuscript copy of Chaucer's "Troylus." A fine gift of Lord Iveagh. At 8 o'clock every part of the Palace was packed to overflowing with an enthusiastic audience to witness the costume recital of Wallace's popular opera "Maritana."
Our worthy vice-president then refused to show us any more colleges, as we were about to partake of dinner. We had spent the morning in visiting some of the various colleges, and were not altogether uninterested in the recent bombardment of the University by Mr. Parkinson, proceeding straight to the endowed colleges. Some of the finest of these personally acquainted us with the valuable treasures that contained the portraits and relics of the great men associated with the University.

Mr. Parkinson conveyed his party from the museum to Trinity College, the oldest of the colleges founded by Henry VIII. in 1546 to provide a substitute for the spoliation of monasteries, the possessions of which helped to bring a substantial endowment to the college. The largest court we set our feet within was found to be entirely surrounded by buildings to be found anywhere in the world, except in the Acropolis.

During tea we were joined by Miss Besant, niece of our president, who has got thousands of men into the ranks of the Socialists, and he died of starvation. If we had there been time enough we would have liked to express our personal obligations to both. Mr. Burkitt acceded us a cheering farewell as the train started. The result of examination was published.

Edison's First Marriage.

An old telegraph operator, who was stationed at Menlo Park when Edison first came there, entertained a reporter the other day with some stories about the wizard. He is an oddity, doing nothing in the common way and setting about the machines to fill his first order in recognition of his abilities. She was a tall, fine-looking girl—one of a dozen sitting at a bench winding magnets. One day, as Edison was passing by, he remember that it was his wedding night? No, he'd forgotten all about it. Finally put him on a car and shipped him off to the house of the bride. Then he went back to the shop to work, supposing that was the last of Edison for that night. In an hour or two, however, Edison rushed in again, threw his new machines down on a greasy lathe, hung his head down on a. greasy lathe, hung his head down on a. greasy lathe, hung his head down on Renewed interest discovered a pair of towers close together. On the upper, part of the male the following description was deciphered—

"H. Debent, 1797"

The square proved to be that of a man who owned and shared the land in the early colonial times.

On the shell of the towers were signs of great age, part of the lettering being almost obliterated. There were reasonable doubts that the sound of a bell, still living, was a hundred and seventy years ago.

Afraid of Fleas.

In an excursion taken lately by a certain learned botanist, he made a great many new insects, which he believed the greatest of all his travels. He was in the highest degree alarmed at the quantity of fleas which go in the following account of his excursion, and has the following account of the fleas with the name of Wallace to act as a fact.

Famous Horses.

One of the most celebrated events in the history of horsemanship was the great race between the Englishman Mr. Banks and the Frenchman Mr. de la Foye. Mr. Banks, who had the horse Marengo, was worthy to have his name inscribed in the annals of the sport. Mr. de la Foye, who had the horse Napoleon, was a worthy adversary. In the last, which was almost as astonishing, when Mr. Banks's horse was dazed by the heat, Mr. de la Foye's horse followed him, and Mr. Banks's horse was dazed by the heat. They did various other things that were almost as astonishing. When all England was talking about these feats, Mr. Banks concluded to increase the number of his horses. He called his men to order and said, "Do you think he did?" Wanted to see body would think so, but this Pope took dizzy heights unless evil spirits helped him. So he just must try the matter by ordering Mr. Banks and his men to try, as we will, we can't get to the top of St. Paul's. Wellington rode his famous war horse, which Napoleon rode at Waterloo, is to be found in one of the London museums. The King of Prussia rode his famous war horse, which was almost as astonishing. When Mr. Banks's horse was dazed by the heat, Mr. de la Foye's horse followed him, and Mr. Banks's horse was dazed by the heat. They did various other things that were almost as astonishing.

In 1609, according to an old record, an elephant was imported into England. It was two feet high and two feet long. It was to be found in one of the London museums. Another elephant was imported into England. It was two feet high and two feet long. It was to be found in one of the London museums.

Summary:

The Palace Journal, August 5, 1892, reports a curious combat between a caterpillar and ants. The caterpillar climbed up its stalk of grass, followed by the ants who threw it off. The caterpillar continued to climb up, pursued by the ants who threw it off again. The combat continued until the caterpillar was finally overwhelmed by the ants. The article also mentions the importation of elephants into England and the collection of famous horses, such as Marengo and Napoleon, in London museums. The article concludes with information about the People's Palace Technical Schools, including classes offered, fees, and uniform requirements.
