A CERTAIN country paper published the other day an account of Sunday at the People's Palace. Some one sent me the description with one or two questions upon it. The article deserved no mention at all except for the illustration it afforded of a kind of falsehood which is fast becoming common in these untruthful days. It spoke first of the desolate appearance of the Palace front, of which we certainly are not proud, but then the front of the Palace has nothing to do with Sunday inside the Palace. The writer then spoke of the organ recitals, which he reduced to none, and of the Library, where he said he found a “few lads” “reading such books as the Palace Library as yet contains.” On the day of which this libellous person wrote, there were two organ recitals, both very numerousy attended, especially the latter: in the evening, the Library was so crowded that the Lecture Hall, taken as an overflow reading-room, was also full. And as regards the number of books, we have got at present 10,000, which, for a year and a half, with but a trifle of expenditure, is very good work indeed. Moreover, the collection is becoming gradually complete in its various branches. Nothing, of course, was said about our Exhibitions and pictures. “And this is all,” said the down-crier in conclusion, “that the People's Palace has done for the people on Sunday!” Why, what does the man want? What more could it do for the people? Is there any other place in this United Kingdom where we can get two Sacred Concerts and a Free Library every Sunday?

The various ways in which the truth may be perverted, are so many that no single and unassisted man could enumerate them. For instance, let us name a few:—There is, first, the Lie Absolute. “This man,” says the enemy, “was once brought up for a felony, and was in prison in 1879.” If no pig was ever stolen by the man accused, and the man never was charged with stealing a pig, and never was in prison at all, this is a Lie Absolute. Next, there is the Suppression of the Truth. “This man,” says the enemy, “was once brought up for stealing a pig.” He neglects to add, being a Suppressor of the Truth, that he was triumphantly acquitted, the pig having been lying all the time in the sty. Then there is the Perversion of the Truth. “This man,” says the enemy, “ was once before the magistrate in a pig-stealing case.” He does not say what he knows, being a Perverter, that the man was the plaintiff and not the defendant. Again there is the Imputed Falsehood. “This man,” says the enemy, “cruelly tortured a fellow-creature to death.” In other words, in the exercise of his duty he sentenced a prisoner to a term of captivity, subject to ordinary gaol regulation, and of this he died. The Motive Lie is another. “This man,” says the enemy, “ has done what he has done, solely in order to gratify his thirst for revenge, or for notoriety, or for money, as the case may be.” There is also the Lie of Diminution, of which my friend's remarks on the Palace furnish so good an example. “Yes,” says the enemy, “the man has painted one or two nice little pictures”—if he is a painter: or, “has written one or two trifling things; if he is an author: or, “has persuaded a few people that he can preach,” if he is a clergyman, and so forth. Thence there is the Lie of Exaggeration, as when the dispersion of a riot is called a massacre. And there is the Lie of Silence, when acts which tell against the Party are passed over without a word. All these recitals are most extensively practised. I wish there was a paper that would occupy itself exclusively to picking out the plums of Falsehood of every kind which so plentifully enrich the Parliamentary pudding and the partisan pie.

I said something last week about Pensions, and I promised more. Mr. Collis, a barrister, has lately compiled for the LADY JACQUES.

March 25th—The day of St. Benedict. This saint was the Founder of the great Order of Benedictines, which spread from the shores of the Mediterranean to the farthest extremities of the Western World. The great principles of the Order were absolute obedience, a life of poverty and prayer. In course of time, however, the Order became possessed of unbounded wealth.

Cranmer was burned on this day, 1556. The High Church party of the day have inductively blackened the character of this great man. It must not be forgotten, however, what he and his friends advocated for the restoration of the Bishops, and the establishment of a College, and the collection of the thousands of manuscripts which had been burned in the fire of Henry VIII.

Cranmer, in 1640, was burned in the Tower. Had it not been for them, there would not be a chance of freedom of worship; people would not have the right to pray in their own tongue. The Church can never be destroyed; all attempts are futile. These attempts are often so vain that they are a blessing.

Robert Southey, poet, died on this day, 1843. He was not a great poet, but he lived the life of his indubitable industry are well worthy to be read.

March 21st—George died on this day, 1813, aged eighty-four years; he was the greatest poet and genius that Germany has ever produced.

March 22nd. Here her son, the little Duke of Gloucester, died at the age of eleven.

March 23rd—Queen Elizabeth died, 1603.

March 24th—Queen Elizabeth died, 1603.

Harlem Raschid, twenty-sixty Caliph, died in the year 805. His name signifies Aaron the Just: he was Caliph, son of a village innkeeper, he began by assuming the ecclesiastical robe, and was destined for the Church, but here his life was left desolate for a time, until the lawyers took charge of him, and his property was confiscated: his house and all his worldly goods were burned at the stake: his property was confiscated: his house and all his worldly goods were burned at the stake; their property was confiscated: their property was confiscated: their property was confiscated: their property was confiscated: their property was confiscated:

THIS INSTITUTION is the oldest and largest Lying-in-Charity in Great Britain. About 4,000 poor Women are annually relieved at the most critical period of their lives without removal from their own homes, a great boon to the poor, as no one need be reminded of the importance of a mother’s presence in a poor man’s family. Moreover, under this system of home-ministration none are denied for want of room; as in the words of the noble President, “ALL LONDON IS THE CHARITY’S HOSPITAL, AND EVERY STREET A WARD.”

In fact, there is no limit to the Charity’s operations but the want of sufficient funds, which are much needed. Six Patients can be annually recommended for a Life Subscription of TEN GUINEAS or an Annual Subscription of ONE GUINEA, or three for A Life Subscription of FIVE GUINEAS, which costs the Charity nearly four times that amount, and the Trustees have had to sell out their funded property to meet this deficiency. The Committee, therefore, earnestly appeal for Contributions, to enable them to fully maintain the benevolent work of this Institution, which will be thankfully received by the Treasurers—SIR JOHN LUBBOCK, Bart., M.P., 15, Lombard Street; or at the Charity’s House, 31, Finsbury Square, E.C., by J. W. LONG, Secretary.
