Notes of the Week.

A so-called International Congress of “Workers” is being held. Rather there are two Congresses, for they have begun by squabbling; and of workers, i.e., of working men, there seem to be few. They all rejoice greatly in calling themselves citizens—copying the foolish example set at the French Revolution. A citizen means the inhabitant of a city: a Roman citizen was originally a native of Rome; a citizen of London is a native or inhabitant of London. They have proposed and adopted a series of resolutions, some just and reasonable, some unattainable, and some silly: thus they want one day’s rest in the week, abolition of night work, technical education, no work for children, responsibility of employers for accident, and equal pay for men and women for equal work. These all are desirable things, and there is no necessity for holding a congress to resolve that they are things which are coming in good time. Then they ask for workshops organised by the workers “with subscriptions from the State.” But what is the State? Is the State a bank overflowing with gold? The State is the general mass of people; are the workers themselves to pay their subscriptions? No, the idea is that the rich must be taxed—at least one supposes so; but what are the riches of the rich? Are they heaps of gold? Not at all, they are bits of paper; they are shares in the prosperity of the country: they are the funds, the railway, the tramway, the docks, the ships, and the great trading companies. We are to tax, therefore, these shares. Now if the credit of the country goes down, or its trade decays, then shares become worthless. Where then are your wealthy people then? Formerly they bought and held land; but most of the land has now gone down so much in value that the people who hold it are no longer rich.

LET us take a single case: there is in a certain parish a great Brewery which is a Company, and yields a good dividend; the shareholders are the rich. Now let us call upon the State to found a great brewery in the same parish, to be worked by working men. These shareholders are taxed to found it; their own brewery is then ruined by the new brewery. Where is the money to be found for the next State-assisted brewery?

Another way of looking at it is, to suppose the State to be run not by taxes levied on the “rich”—because the Socialists will have no “rich”—but on the whole community, by taxes on food, drink, imports of all kinds. If there are to be no rich people to tax of course these things must be taxed, because the State must be run somehow; but think of the enormous burdens which we shall lay on ourselves if we attempt, in addition to the necessary taxes for the maintenance of the Empire, to tax our working people in order to subsidise the workshops. Why, it will be taking the money out of one pocket in order to put it, greatly reduced in the course of the operation, into the other.

There is, next, to be a minimum wage in accordance with a reasonable standard of living. I have often thought of a minimum wage in considering the hardships of working women. Yet let us see what it means. A minimum rate of wage means limited production and an artificially ruled market. How can a woman be paid more for making a shirt than the shirt will fetch in the market? Let every one who is interested in the question—and who is not?—apply it to his own trade, and see how it will work. All trade is speculative to a certain extent. The manufacturer of the stuff never knows to a certainty how much of it he will be able to sell.

Palace and Institute Notes.

A new examination in Surveying was held on the 19th inst. at the Institute. The examiners were Messrs. J. T. Browning, Charles B. Jackets, J. T. Howland, and W. J. Forth. The candidates were not numerous, but a few of them passed, viz.: Messrs. J. T. Browning, Charles B. Jackets, and W. J. Forth. The candidates who were not successful might with advantage repeat their examination, which is stated to be held on the 1st of next month at the same place.

PEOPLE'S PALACE SWIMMING CLUB.

Result of Challenge Match. In a recent challenge match, the members of the Palace Swimming Club met the members of the Bayswater Swimming Club at their usual bathing ground. The matches were closely contested, and the score was five to seven in favor of the Palace Club.

PEOPLE'S PALACE RAMBLEDGE.

On Saturday the 3rd inst. a party of 60 members of the Palace Rambledge started from the Belgrave, Embankment, and proceeded in two trains to the Palace. They were welcomed by a hearty reception at the Belgrave, and the party proceeded to the Railway Station, where they took the train for the Palace. The party arrived in safety, and were met by the officers of the Club, who conducd them to the Palace. The party then proceeded to the Palace, where they were received by the President and Committee, and the proceedings commenced.

Bellairs, I implored you to say yes or no? You have taken no sort of notice. At last I could bear it no longer, and I went to the bank where you keep all your money. I signed my name to your book, and you have never even acknowledged my letter. I implored you not to say no, not to hurt me so. I have never refused to obey you.

Bellairs. I have never got your letter!

Lily. Because you were angry with me? Are you angry with me for loving you?

Bellairs. Tell me, can you love me?

Lily. Tell me, can you love me?

Bellairs. There can be no "but" if I love you: nothing can or shall come between us. I'll give you my consent to marry Grandfather Bellairs. And I'll make you a liberal provision.

Lily. You little fool! Grandfather has found out somehow how or of what use you may be to me. He is not here, and I don't believe he thought, and quite right too, that he would make you a liberal provision.

Bellairs. Now I see that he is really mad! But how is it you say Arnold is going to write, and propose to me last night, and I can't imagine why he didn't.

Lily. Grandfather Bellairs has never asked me to marry him. Arnold was a mistake.

Bellairs. That's a pity.

Lily. Damned pity. I think of that very often.

Bellairs. That's a pity. I think of that very often.

Lily. And besides that, he's as poor as a church mouse, and I'm not going to be his heiress, I want to marry Arnold.

Lily. But when did you see him?

Bellairs. I haven't seen him. I was in your letter to you. Lily, you must have read my letter.

Lily. If he has got to be called such nonsense names.

Bellairs. No, I couldn't be such a brute as to forbid our marriage.

Bellairs. Suppose I taken no sort of notice. At last I could bear it no longer, and I went to the bank where you keep all your money. I signed my name to your book, and you have never even acknowledged my letter. I implored you not to say no, not to hurt me so. I have never refused to obey you.

Lily. I promise you, I wouldn't marry your grand-dad, if he asked me. (Aside, coldly) Why do you object to him so much?

Bellairs. (to object to him.) I should think I've made enough to object to a fellow who comes into my house and steals my money, and I don't want to be your heiress, I want to marry Arnold. And besides that, he's as poor as a church mouse, and I'm not going to be his heiress, I want to marry Arnold.

Bellairs. You think at my age I can be made to believe anything, but I'm not so old yet but what I can alter my will, and I will not have my money spent in any way you like. I'm not so old yet but what I can alter my will, and I will not have my money spent in any way you like. I'm not so old yet but what I can alter my will, and I will not have my money spent in any way you like.

Lily. Does't he? That shows how much you know about me!

Bellairs. What do you mean by that, I dare say I shall soon be out of your way; a man isn't fit to be called a man when he's called by that name. My name is Mr Bellairs, and I have got £10,000 a year, and you have no business to call me anything but Miss Lavender. You have no business to call me anything but Miss Lavender.

Lily. I promise you I won't marry him, grandpapa, anyhow, but I should have been so sorry to do it against your will.

Bellairs. Thank you, Mr. Lavender, I should have married your grand-daughter in any case, but I prefer to do it with your sanction.

Mr. Lavender (to the audience). But for that telegraphic message, you certainly would never have had. The End.
