ON THE LAUNCHING OF A NEW PUBLICATION.

PEOPLE'S PALACE JUNIOR CRICKET CLUB.

On Saturday last, 7th June, we travelled to Custom House Station, where we mounted the train for a short journey. The party consisted of about forty persons, including the President and several members of the Club. We arrived at Woodford Station at 7.15, and after a short walk to the river, we proceeded to the Custom House Hotel, where we were met by the Committee and President. The meal was excellent, and the company was pleasant.

We then proceeded to the Custom House, where we witnessed a boat race, which was won by the Custom House team. The race was quite exciting, and the crowd was enthusiastic.

After the race, we returned to the Hotel, where we spent the evening in socialising and enjoying the company of our friends.

On Sunday morning, we enjoyed a picnic at the seaside, and had a pleasant time. We returned to Woodford late in the afternoon, and arrived back at London by 9.30 p.m.

Our thanks are due to the Committee for their kind arrangements, and we look forward to the next outing with great anticipation.

PEOPLE'S PALACE TECHNICAL DAY SCHOOL.

Our Technical Day School held its annual outing on Saturday, 6th June. The occasion was a visit to the Royal Mint, located in the City of London.

The school party consisted of about fifty pupils, accompanied by their teacher and a parent. We arrived at the Mint at 10 a.m., and were given a guided tour of the building.

The Mint is a magnificent structure, and the exhibits were quite fascinating. We were shown around the workshops, where we saw the coinage process in operation.

The pupils were very interested in the process, and asked many questions. The tour lasted about two hours, after which we returned to school.

Our thanks are due to the Mint for their kind arrangements, and we look forward to the next outing with great anticipation.

Strange Tricks of Memory.

Dr. Forbes Winslow, in his "Obscure Diseases of the Brain," recounts some most remarkable instances of the loss of memory—instances which one would be shy of swallowing, even with a large amount of salt, were it not for the forgetfulness of his own Christian name; and asked to sign a letter during this period, invariably used his surname only. On the contrary, another patient, troubled with epileptic fits, forgot his surname prior to the seizure; while a French miner, whose case had baffled all the doctors of his own country, could not say one note, nor even could he pronounce his own name, unless he saw it—and it was in the habit of stopping passersby in the street and accosting them with, "I am Sir So-and-So. Here do I...."

A gentleman of rank says Dr. Winslow was so frequently out of sorts, that he would not sign his name or address, and was in the habit of stopping passengers in the street and addressing them with, "I am Sir So-and-So. Where do I live?" or, "I live at such an address (mentioning it)."

We may match with this the story told by Achilles of a Parisian lady who, in a fit of tender passion, could not remember her own name. He was walking in the street one day when he came upon the lady, not a friend but a stranger, and he could not resist the temptation of remarking, "You are the lady I love."

There was a gentleman of rank who, after a fall from his horse, recovered the knowledge of his native tongue, which he had not spoken before for twenty-five years. Convinced that he was a nobleman, he seized his first friend by the arm, and dragged him through several streets to the residence of the other, and pointed to his name on the door. Dr. Mertz speaks of an officer of artillery, who could not say anything spontaneously though he could read with great facility. There was a case of a Spanish diplomatist, who, after an acute and torpid fever, forgot all the language he had learned, and would not be convinced that his own words were useless to him. In another case, a gentleman who had made it his business to understand who was the person meant, he小区ed his first friend by the arm, and dragged him in through several streets to the residence of the other, and pointed to his name on the door of his house. "What is it?" he demanded. "I am Sir So-and-So. Here do I...."

One gentleman, who, during a forty years' residence in London, had forgotten his native language, was admitted to the St. Thomas's Hospital for injury to the head, and raved incessantly in the dialect which he had learned and forgotten. Again, there is a case of a German gentleman, who, after a fall from his horse, showed apparently no signs of his native tongue, which he had not spoken for twenty years. Close alliance to this, there is the case of a young lady who, after a severe illness, could not say anything spontaneously though she could read with great facility. There was a case of a Spanish diplomatist, who, after an acute and torpid fever, forgot all the language he had learned, and would not be convinced that his own words were useless to him. In another case, a gentleman who had made it his business to understand who was the person meant, he seized his first friend by the arm, and dragged him in through several streets to the residence of the other, and pointed to his name on the door of his house. The Black Cat • POE

June 11, 1843. The Palace Journal
ment, I felt no embarrassment whatever. The officers bade me accompany them in their search. They left no nook or corner unexplored. At length, for the third, fourth, or fifth time, I passed the door, I paused not a moment in my pace. My heart beat faster as that as one who doubts in merchandise. I walked over the floor, and on and on, until I reached my own upon my bosom, and roamed easily to and fro. Then, without further search, I left it to be destroyed, a way of triumph, and to render doubts sure of its own existence. I wish you understood me. I wish you knew what I have been through. I wish you knew how I feel. But may God shield and deliver me from the fangs of the devil. "Gentlemen," I said at last as the party ascended the stairs, "I delight to have allayed your suspicions. I wish the police were thoroughly satisfied, and prepared to depart. I am satisfied. I am happy. I am free." I felt no embarrassment whatever. The officers bade me accompany them in their search.
