THE LADIES' COLUMN.

HERE is annually an occupation left for cotton in many foreign countries. which, on account of its high price, is not found, and still we hear of its being employed. For instance, to London, now, is a lady of the city of London, who is most successful in the manufacture of fine silk. And Madame Sei is doing such a business, that she has been obliged to go to Paris, and has opened a branch in that city. Her business is so successful, that she has been obliged to take a large number of hands, and has opened a branch in the West End of London.

In reason of this lady, of course, the silk trade is raised considerably. And Madame Sei is doing such a business, that she has been obliged to go to Paris, and has opened a branch in that city. Her business is so successful, that she has been obliged to take a large number of hands, and has opened a branch in the West End of London.

Another lady has set up as a dressmaker, and has opened her own house, for the purpose of selling her own dresses. This lady was the Sunday wedding dressmaker. She has a lady, who has been in the dressmaking business, and who has given notice of a dressmaker. This dressmaker is a very successful one, and has opened a branch in the West End of London. She has a large number of hands, and has opened a branch in the West End of London.

These are two of many women in London practising as dressmakers, who are very successful, and who have opened their own houses, for the purpose of selling their own dresses. This lady was the Sunday wedding dressmaker. She has a lady, who has been in the dressmaking business, and who has given notice of a dressmaker. This dressmaker is a very successful one, and has opened a branch in the West End of London. She has a large number of hands, and has opened a branch in the West End of London.

But with all the increased facilities for the employment of women, it is still difficult to fix the right worker in the work. No work should be undertaken by anyone without a reasonable amount of practice and experience, the lack of which will naturally result in failure.

ART.—The Marchioness of Lorne has just finished a statue of her daughter, the Princess Royal, which now stands near the round pond, opposite the window in Kensington Palace where Her Majesty was formerly employed. This statue is said to be highly finished, and to be ready for the public. The Marchioness of Lorne is a lady of no mean women, written by well-known literarv ladies These Women Series. 1

A Hindu gentleman greatly interested in the subject of "child marriage," has written a paper, entitled " The Appeal," dealing with this most hideous of customs. This may be had from B. Moore, 16, Drukefield Road, St. Catherine's Park, S E.

The Palace ladies, I fancy it is no idle boast to say that we can uphold the honour of the Palace in a display of this kind. Women have been superintended at the Ludgate Hill post office by men, on the ground that " the work was too hard for the present generation of women to perform. " This is a mistake which will not occur when all women feel the importance of health over any other occupation. When women take to boxing and fighting ducks, it is time something should be done in the family where such disgusting exhibitions are to be found. We only hope their wounds will bring them to their senses, and let us hope their wounds will bring them to their senses.

Miss MAURICE MANCINI

I had a message to send her.
To her whom my soul loves best.
But I had my task to finish,
And she had gone home to rest.

To rest in the far, bright Heavens.
Ah, so far away from home!
If ever I should speak to my darling,
For I knew she could not hear.

I placed it one summer evening
On a little, white cloud's breast.
But it faded in golden splendour
And died in the crimson west.

I gave it the lark next morning,
And I watched it soar and soar,
But its pinions grew faint and weary.
And it fluttered to earth once more.

I cried in my passionate longing,
"Has the earth no angel friend
Who will carry my love the message
My heart desires to send?"

Then I heard a strain of music.
So mighty, so pure, so dear.
That my very sorrow was silent.
And my heart stood still to bear.

I placed it one summer evening
On a little, white cloud's breast.
But it faded in golden splendour
And died in the crimson west.

I gave it the lark next morning.
And I watched it soar and soar.
But its pinions grew faint and weary.
And it fluttered to earth once more.

I cried in my passionate longing,
"Has the earth no angel friend
Who will carry my love the message
My heart desires to send?"

Then I heard a strain of music.
So mighty, so pure, so dear.
That my very sorrow was silent.
And my heart stood still to bear.
